

Steve Kane
Project Superintendent

Steve Kane is a Project Superintendent for AccuTech Construction, and in this role, he is responsible for overall project safety and project quality. Steve began his construction career as a union carpenter in Northern California, and traveled across the U.S. constructing retail, primary and post-secondary education, and commercial facilities.

He considers himself incurable from a desire to be in the construction work, and enjoys changing old spaces into new ones. This enjoyment translates to subcontractors, which enables projects to proceed smoothly. Steve considers every project as a new and unique opportunity to enthusiastically mediate between design documents and the finished product - owners love him for this.

When not building things, Steve can be found backpacking in the wilderness in national parks, and fishing.
